Report Explores Migratory Effects on Latinos' Health

Many Latino immigrants eat less healthy foods after they move to the U.S., according to a report (<http://sph.berkeley.edu/forum-launches-binational-health-week>) from UC-Berkeley's Health Initiative of the Americas. Meanwhile, about one-third of adult Mexican immigrants diagnosed with diabetes are uninsured, according to the report.

"Study Examines Economic Impact of Latino Health Issues (<http://audio.californiareport.org/archive/R201510050850/a>)" (Jhabvala Romero, California Report, 10/5).
